

The questions families ask first.

What is an adult family home?

A regular house in a neighborhood, licensed by Washington State, where a small number of adults live and are cared for — usually no more than six.

How is it different from assisted living?

Assisted living is a large building with a front desk. This is a house. The same few people care for your parent every day, and you talk straight to them.

What does it cost?

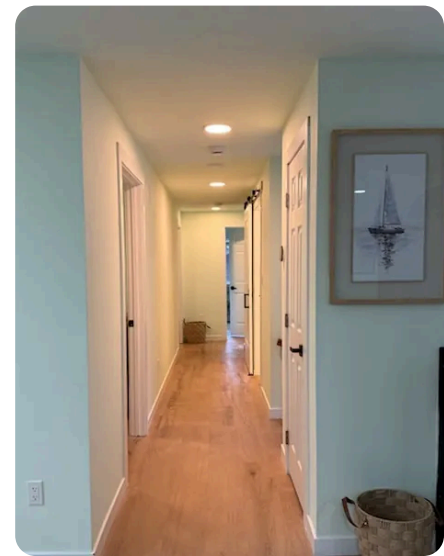

It depends how much help your parent needs. Call and we will give you a straight number.

Do you have room?

Openings change. Call and we will tell you what is open today, or say so if we are full.

Can we visit first?

Yes, and we hope you will. Walking through the house is the only real way to know if it fits your family.

What we help

OUR CARE

Bathing and dressing
Help washing, dressing, and getting around the house safely.

Medications on time
Given when they should be, written down, refilled before they run out.

Home-cooked meals
Three meals a day, cooked in the kitchen, adjusted for your parent's diet.

Someone here all night
Not an alarm or an answering service. A person, awake, in the house.

A real house, not a facility. Your mom or dad is known by name, not by room number.
